Earlier this year Powys County Council's cabinet backed the plans for a 420-pupil English-medium school and 120 Welsh-medium school in Welshpool to replace four existing schools under a review of primary education in the town.

It would result in Ardwyn, Gungrog and Oldford schools closing to make way for the new English language schools which would be built near Welshpool High School, and a Welsh-medium school opening in the town – possibly at the site currently home to Ysgol Maesydre.

Powys County Council said final approval for funding will require further scrutiny by the Welsh Government at Outline Business Case and Full Business Case stage.

OSWESTRY Orthopaedic Hospital is leading the way in a pioneering £2 million project to improve quality of care across England, it has been revealed.

And in a further boost the world famous hospital was this week named as a "Centre of Excellence" for its outstanding care for people with muscular dystrophy.

Acting chief executive John Grinnell said the hospital was working with the Royal Orthopaedic in Birmingham and the Stammore in London on the £2 million Vanguard project.

"The aim is to improve quality in orthopaedic care in England, creating a model for others to follow," Mr Grinnell said.

Grinnell said.

Mr Grinnell said that a special team from the three centres had been set up to create the standards. This, he said, would improve clinical outcomes for patients as well as improving quality of life, patient experience and patient confidence.

Muscular Dystrophy UK has awarded the hospital with "Centre of Excellence" status, following a rigorous UK-wide audit of neuromuscular services by a panel of experts.

The Oswestry service is now only one of 10 neuromuscular centres in the UK to meet the charity's specialist criteria.

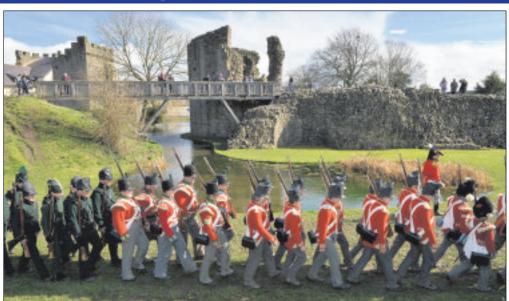

Oswestry's specialist team currently looks after 1,046 local patients, who receive expert advice, physiotherapy and hydrotherapy crucial to maintaining their health and wellbering.

Dr Tracey Willis, consultant paediatric neurologist, said: "This recognition for our centre is brilliant for the staff. It makes them feel valued and is public acknowledgement that they are

Town needs its own care centre says deputy mayor

AS the second biggest town in Shropshire, Oswestry needs its own urgent care centre, according to its deputy mayor. Councillor Paul Milner said Oswestry's Minor Injuries Unit is the busiest in the county – despite it being one of the units open the least amount of hours. He said it strengthens the case for an urgent care centre to be based in the town. Last year 9,539 patients used the unit at Oswestry Health Centre in Thomas Savin Road. He was speaking following a meeting on urgent care provision in the town on Wednesday last week. The meeting in Oswestry was one of a number being held by Shropshire Clinical Commissioning Group, the organisation responsible for healthcare in the county. Urgent care centres would be created as organicare centres would be created as part of the proposed shake-up of healthcare and A&E units in the county. They would be available to people who need non-emergency and non-life threatening treatment. But fears have been raised that some areas could miss out.

Currently there are minor injuries units in towns across the county, including Whitchurch, Bridgnorth, Ludlow and Bishop's Castle.

Councillor Milner said: "Local health services need to remain local, and with Oswestry being the second biggest town in the county and having the most used minor injuries unit, I think Oswestry needs minor injuries unit, I think Oswestry needs an urgent care centre, and this needs to be sooner, rather than later.

"We need to save people from travelling to Shrewsbury and Telford, especially as it's even harder for people in Oswestry to get to Telford."

He said overall the meeting held at the Guildhall was "positive".

"Really I think the CCG were inviting people there for them to contribute their ideas and get their views across in order to help shape the future of urgent care in the county and to feed in the overall conversa-

county and to tect in its country and to tect in its country and to tect in its country and it think a lot of good views and ideas were expressed such as extending Oswestry Minor Injuries Unit's opening times because it's the busiest unit but one of the ones open the least number of hours. Peo-ones open the least number of nours. Peo-ple were also asking about when decisions were going to be made because of course people are concerned and want to know what's happening."

Councillor Miner also said he believed people needed better educated on what services minor injuries units offer and sug-gested the county's units opening times be uniform.

BREEZE ABOUT TOWN

Whenever anyone mentions Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital I am always the first to praise the facility as one of the best in the world – and almost everyone you racility as one of the best in the world – and almost everyone you talk to has a story to tell about treatment at Gobowen.

So it's sad to read that because I live in Wales I can expect to wait a lot longer than English patients if I need surgery at the hospital and even for English patients the wait of 12 months is simply too long.

My family links to the Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital – now an NHS Foundation Trust – go back over 80 years to when revolutionary "pinning" surgery saved my father's leg following a serious motorcycling accident in Four Crosses. So the hospital was always talked about favourably in ways talked about favourably in the Breeze household through out his lifetime.

There have been major changes at the top at the trust after a health regulator Monitor criticised the hospital because too many patients had waited longer than the national targets. So you could say the new 12 month figure property a printing that ure represents a significant im-provement – unless you live in Wales of course.

Wales of course.

Of course you need to get a referral appointment long before any surgery is prescribed. The hospital trust says 85 per cent of English patients fall within the 18-week referral to treatment targets, though that's below the national 92 per cent target.

The Welsh government has a 26-week referral target and the 26-week referral target and the trust blames problems with the contract with the commissioncontract with the commission-ers for patients falling outside that deadline. That's not what you want to hear if waiting for life-changing surgery. But the problems are being compounded, it seems, by peo-ple failing to turn up for appoint-ments.

Missed appointments cost the hospital more than £800,000 last year it has been revealed. More than 5,000 patients failed to turn up. The hospital has done its bit by introducing a new text reminder service as well as an evening call reminder system so the blame clearly lies with the patient. There really is no excuse for simply not turning up.

Easter saw carnage on the roads of Mid Wales with five people killed and several others seriously injured in a spate of accidents which brought devastating implications to many families who should have been enjoying a seasonal break. On Good Friday an 83-year-old lady died in tragic circumstances on the Moors Length between Welshpool and Oswestry and on Sunday I sat in a queue of traffic as police closed the road to allow family members to visit the low family members to visit the site of the accident – their faces told the story, their lives changed

We love our green fields in Shropshire and Mid Wales but we need new homes. MARK ANDREWS reports

Davies walks Oswestry's Iron Age hillfort. 'I've been coming here since I was young," he says. "We've got to protect it, we've got to protect our heritage."

Few recent planning disputes have caused more emotion in Shropshire than plans to build 117 houses on land in the shadow of the ancient

The proposals, recently approved in Shropshire Council's plans for the next decade, are in the spotlight once more after being highlighted by comedian Griff Rhys Jones in his television series Griff's Great Britain.

Image

But while the programme casts a terribly romantic image about people's love of the British countryside, it also highlights the problems faced by planners.

On the one hand, the desire to preserve the county's landscape, which has been carefully preserved for generations. On the other is the desperate need for new Shropshire Council's Samdev plan, Shropshire Council's Samdev plans, signed off just before Christmas, committed the council to approving 18,000 new homes over the next decade. Neighbouring Telford & Wrekin has committed to 15,555 new homes over the next 15 years.

10,000 new homes over the next 10 years. But, if past experience is anything to go by, achieving these targets will not necessarily be plain sailing.

One of the reasons Shropshire needs so many homes is that only 9,500 were built in the district over the past 10 years. This has caused it to fall behind an agreed target of 27,500 homes by 2026. If it is to meet the target, Shropshire district will need to double its house-building rate.

And, perhaps in recognition of the problem, the Government in February announced a shake-up of the planning process. Under proposals, now going out for consultation, developers will be able to pay extra for a passport-style "fast-track" application process.

More radical are plans which will also allow developers to choose which planning authority to submit their applies.

allow developers to choose which pian-ning authority to submit their applica-tions to.

Under the arrangement, the final decision would still be made locally, but local authorities would compete against one another to handle the administrative side of the process. There has even been the suggestion of private companies being licensed to carry out the work.

Communities Secretary Greg Clark says: "Council planning departments play a vital role in getting local house-building off the ground, but for too long they have had no incentive to get things done quickly or better, resulting in drawn out applications and local frustration.

"These proposals will be a boost for frustration.

"These proposals will be a boost for housebuilders looking to build muchneeded homes, and for local people looking to get a planning permission for home improvements through their local council quicker."

The proposed shake-up has not gone down well with Vernon Bushell, a Labour councilor from Shrawshur who bour councillor from Shrewsbury who is chairman of Shropshire Council's central planning committee.

"I don't like it at all," he says

"I don't know how they are going to run it, but I think it is best handled lo-cally by our planning officers." He foresees the difficulties coming through marginal cases, where an of-

"Sometimes the officers will talk to the local councillors, they might say do you think this one should come to committee?' It's all very well for the Government to say 'we want thousands of houses built here and here', but we have got a system that works." got a system that works." Councillor Arthur Walpole who rep-the county.

"I'm all for more competition if it improves efficiency, but we also depend a lot on local knowledge," says Councillor

"Well over 90 per cent of applications are decided by the officers under delegated powers, I don't know how that would work. It's an interesting one to debate, but I would want to see the response from the public."

In neighbouring Telford & Wrekin Council, there has been a fierce debate over the past few weeks regarding how many houses actually need to be built.

In February, leader of the opposition Conservative group Councillor Andrew Eade accused the Labour-run of inflating its housebuilding targets, saying the council's "Duty to Cooperate" report published in January stated that just 9,940 new homes were needed to meet local demand.

9,940 new homes were needed to meet local demand.
However, Labour's Councillor Richard Overton says the local plan has actually cut the number of new homes to be built in the borough by more than 40 per cent from when the Tories were in control, in 2010.

WORKING FOR YOU

Last week in Parliament, Shropshire MPs welcomed food and drink producers from across the county to Parliament for the Shropshire Day in Parliament. This gave me and my colleagues a chance to promote some of the produce grown and manufac-tured locally. North Shropshire was well represented by Belton Cheese, Gill's Puddings, May-nard's Farm and Story Drinks.

We are hampered by our membership of the Common Agricultural Policy which forces us to accent compromise. forces us to accept compromises which are at best deeply unsatisfactory and at worst actively damaging to UK farmers. A UK policy should encourage import substitution, the export of quality products and the Government should continue to direct public procurement towards UK producers.

MY HUSBAND IS ABUSIVE BUT I HAVE NO JOB AND NOWHERE TO GO. WHAT CAN I

Q: I admit my husband has a very stressful job but lately he has been shouting at me and the children more and more, to the point where I am becoming a nervous wreck and the children are frightened when he is around. I really want to leave him to protect the children from his abusive behaviour, but I do not work and I have nowhere to go. What can I do?

A: The government definition of domestic violence was changed recently to 'any incident of threatening behaviour, violence or abuse (psychological, physical, sexual, financial or emotional) between adults who are or have been intimate partners or family members, regardless of gender or sexuality'.

As it appears that you are a victim of domestic abuse you may qualify for legal aid to enable you to commence divorce and financial proceedings against your husband. An application could be made to the Court for an Order that your husband continue to support you and the children financially until the divorce proceedings have been finalised. It would be possible for you to also apply to the Court for an Occupation Order which could basically remove him from the home, but this may take some time and would usually not be awarded without your husband being given the opportunity of aiving the Court his version of events.

If you genuinely fear your husband and believe he is emotionally harming the children with his behaviour you should seek advice from your local authority children services and also Women's Aid on 0808 2000 247 (England) 0808 8010 800 (Wales). They will listen to your concerns, signpost you to other organisations or lawyers that can help and may be able to arrange for you and your children to be temporarily placed in a refuge.

A PROJECT to reduce pressure on health and social care is "flying" in Oswestry, ac-cording to a council chief.

cording to a council chief.

The Resilient Communities Project is aimed at keeping people away from formal social care and hospital for as long as possible by pointing them to services that exist in the community already, such as support groups, and social clubs.

Speaking to Oswestry Town Council's Finance and General Purposes Committee, Kate Garner, locality commissioning manager for Shropshire Council, said the project had made a "great start".

She said the project was important because the whole area is trying to tackle the "enormous challenge" of reducing the demand on health and social care.

"Its objective is to increase the level demand on nealth and social care. "Its objective is to increase the level and quality of communication which is in place in the community," she said. "The communication is around community activity and the service delivery to link up health and social care professionals to enable them to support the people they're working with."

ble they're working with."

Ms Garner said activities like social clubs, public events, and support services were largely based at central locations in the town.

The project's aim is to encourage people to use these free services that already exist, to minimise the need for formal social care.

Oswestry and Shropshire councillor Oswestry and Shropshire councillor Vince Hunt, who is leading the scheme locally, said: "I am a preventative person rather than a cure person. I don't want someone to need 18 hours of help per week. I want them to be able to help themselves.

"This isn't shout taking away somices."

"This isn't about taking away services but about enhancing their quality of life."

Telford & Wrekin Council has launched the campaign #PRH4Me, with a new website going live this week where people can log on and share their stories in a bid to show how vital the hospital is to the people who use it. Bosses say they hope the campaign will show how much public support there is for the PRH in the months leading up to July, when health chiefs are expected to announce their preferred choice for the location of A&E and other key services in Shropshire.

It is almost certain to result in relocation of services at both the Princess Royal and the Royal Shrewsbury hospitals.

NHS Future Fit is currently carrying out a review of acute hospital services in Shrewsbury and Telford and Wrekin.

Services pledge to work together to tackle crisis

Report by Amy Downward

THEY are two services under intense pressure.

And this week West Midlands Ambulance Service and Shrewsbury and Tel-ford Hospital NHS Trust pledged to work together to tackle a crisis that forcing patients to wait in ambulances for more than 30 minutes before being admitted. A Freedom of Information request has revealed that half of all ambulances arriving at Telford's Princess Royal Hospital and Shrews-Telford's Princess Royal Hospital and Shrewsbury Royal Hospital are facing delays. The problem comes from increasing difficulties being caused by a continual rise in demand from patients, both through 999 calls to the ambulance service and people attending A&E. Simon Wright, chief executive at The Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust, said: "It has been well reported that the NHS, both nationally and locally, has been incredibly busy in recent months.

"We've seen a 15 per cent increase in attendances at our A&E departments, which is a significant figure as our attendance levels over nificant figure as our attendance levels over the course of a year are in excess of 100,000 people. "With the support of our commissioners we've made improvements, such as the introduction of additional nurses to accept and support patients. This is better for patients and allows ambulance crews to return to the road more quickly.

"Around 50 per cent of patients brought into our A&E departments by ambulance need to be admitted for further care. We're working to ensure the remaining patients who don't need to be admitted are taken to the most appropri-ate place to be seen or treated rather than face an unnecessary trip to A&E.

Solutions

"We know that too many people are attending hospital for urgent care when there may be somewhere more appropriate, and of those who need to be admitted too many are facing delays before they can be discharged from hospital to allow them to return home or move into a more appropriate care setting.

"The trust is working with the national Emergency Care Improvement Programme (ECIP) and is also building on learning from our partnership with the Virginia Mason Institute in Seattle as well as from other acute trusts in England to ensure all opportunities for improvement are being taken. We will continue to work hard with partner organisations, including West Midlands Ambulance Service, to reduce delays for ambulance crews."

Chris Kowalik, of West Midlands Ambulance Service, said: "The trust has seen an increase in delays handing patients over to both Delays such as these mean that if ambulances have to wait to offload patients, they are then not available to respond to other 999 calls. The trust continues to work closely with the Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust to find solutions to the delays in retiral bandance."

The revelation about delays come as council officials demand answers over what they say is the "deteriorating trend" in Shropshire's ambulance response times.

WHILE some were hunting for Report by Naomi Penrose Easter eggs at one of Shropshire's medieval castles, others were recreating one of the bloodiest battles of the 19th century.

The Napoleonic Wars came to the Oswestry area over the Easter bank holiday weekend as multiple historical re-enactment groups got together kit-ted out in the uniforms of the French, Portuguese and English and battled like it was 1812.

They were there to re-enact the siege of Badajoz, Spain, 2,300 miles away from Whitington Castle where this weekend's more family-friendly version of the battle was acted out by the history enthusiasts.

of the garrison at Badajoz, Armand Phillipon, was captured after the siege and transported to Oswestry.

He stayed until July 1812, before he broke his parole along with another French officer and was smuggled back to France with the help of a few locals.

The siege itself was a fight between Napoleon's forces in Badajoz and an English and Portuguese allied force led by General Arthur Wellesley – later known as the Duke of Wellington – who laid siege to the town to force their surrender.

At Whittington visitors were able to stroll through both the allied and French living history camps. They were able to witness the troops preparing for battle, cleaning their weapons, shoring up defences, practising drill and cooking rations. There was a surgeon on hand in the French camp to show how wounds were treated and limbs amputated. The siege itself featured wooden scaling ladders, ropes and grappling hooks, wooden palisades, lots of gun-powder and even pyrotechnic mines. hooks, wooden palisades, lots of gun-powder and even pyrotechnic mines.

Puzzled by Spring clean? Give your security the once-over too

Report by Simon Stone

ACCORDING to research, the average spring clean takes us Brits 16 hours and 20 minutes, spread over four days.

But aside from sorting cupboards and scrubbing floors, the annual spring clean is the perfect opportunity to undertake a quick and simple home security audit, just to ensure that your property is as secure as can be.

With that in mind, the security specialists at Yale have put together their top ten tips for anyone thinking of sprucing up their home security this springtime.

1. Check your front door security. Update your letterplate to avoid fishing crime, and check any door viewers and chains are in good working order.

2. Replacing the lock cylinder is an effective and easy way of making your home secure, without having to change the entire lock or door. Always opt for British Standard various ard versions.

3. Consider fitting a smart lock to your front door. They can allow you to access your home remotely, by PIN code, keyfob, keycard, keytag, or even a smartphone.

keycard, keytag, or even a smartphone.

4. Ensure all your windows are fitted with at least one appropriate lock, especially ground floor windows which have the potential to be accessed easily.

5. Check your home alarm is still in good working order, or invest in one if your home is currently unprotected. Yale's easy-to-fit home alarms start from as little as £100 and can be installed in an afternoon.

6. To protect yourself from identity theft, important documents, passports and other valuables should be stored in a home safe, bolted securely to the floor or wall.

7. If you have a side gate to your back garden secure it using a weatherproof padlock and hasp to deter thieves from gaining access.

8. Secure valuables in your shed using an anchor and hasp. Also consider secur-ing items such as ladders and tools, which a burglar could use to gain access to your home.

9. Consider fitting a CCTV system; they allow you to keep a careful eye on your home and its boundaries while you are away and recorded footage can be supplied to the police in the event of a break-in.

10. Opportunist thereas can even use wheelie bins to gain access to your home. Move them out of view if possible and away from any flat roofs or window ledges. Yale security products are available from local locksmiths or from many large retailers and hardware stores in the area.

Professional

Meanwhile, with Home Improvement Month set to take place in April, new figures reveal that eight in ten Brits would rather do DIY than hire a professional. The same survey shows that 85 per cent would rather do the decorating themselves than hire a professional and a quarter (25 per cent) of us admit to judging the appearance of people's home.

There are many different pros and cons to doing DIY yourself. The increasing cost of professionals combined with the easy access to purchasing your own DIY equipment mean it's never been easier to spruce was the bone yourself.

Here are some top tips to make the best out of Doing It Yourself, making small improvements to your home in the best ways you can: Small Storage Solutions

Small storage Solutions
Storage can often be a problem, particularly if you live in a small house or flat. You have to be imaginative when making the most out of your home. Dead space underneath stairs can often be a good area to begin; you can add shelves, shee racks or stairs can obtain the stairs can often be a good area to begin; you can add shelves, shee racks or

Liven Things Up
This can be a really easy way to liven up a kitchen or living area. Plants and flowers can be a cheap way to add a splash of colour to your home. A miniature herb garden is an easy way to utilise small spaces in the kitchen. Chilli plants, Lemongrass, Thyme and Oregano are all extremely easy and low maintenance to grow. A top tip is to purchase plants that haven't already been growing outside.

If you're planning a spring clean this Easter, it's the perfect time to overhaul your home security measures too

Fitting a house alarm is an excellent deterrent of the best ways to improve your home. A recent study by National Gardening Gift Vouchers found that 72 per cent of us believe that a presentable garden adds value to a home – so it is well worth a go. A shed can now also be easily to build yourself and readily available. They are available in all different shapes and sizes, so no matter how small your garden, a small shed or storage space can add new dimensions to your outdoor space.

Reviving Old Furniture

Updating your furniture can seem daunting. It can be tempting to go out and buy completely new furniture however sometimes it's easier to look a bit closer to home. Renovating your own furniture can be cheap and easy. An old, worn, wooden chest of drawers can be instantly improved with a lick of paint and some new handles.

Painting
There's no better way of refreshing your home than a quick lick of paint. To give your living spaces a quick and clean update, make sure you buy a good quality paint that is an exact (or close) match to your original colour, this way you avoid doing a fully fledged redecorate.

Home Improvement Month (April 1-30) aims to inspire, educate and empower the UK to make the most of their homes.

A spokesman said: "This April, choose a room in your home to start a Home Improvement Revolution. This is your chance to finally take on that project, see it through and feel proud of the results."

Fountain pen is write way to make impression!

ANTIQUES AND COLLECTIBLES

THERE is something about using a fountain pen that makes writing a pleasure rather than a necessity - and using a vintage pen adds a certain old-fashioned glamour to the whole experience.

Some people are so taken with the idea that they collect vintage fountain pens, some of them amassing literally hun-

The older the pen, the more valuable it is and the experts will know what manufacturer names to look out for at auction.

One of the oldest fountain pen makers were American company L E Waterman, founded in 1884, whose first pens were made from hard rubber and subsequently in-

These early pens were expensive but the plastic Patrician pen introduced by Wa terman in later years was much more affordable – and whilst Waterman had been busy refining his products a certain George Parker had been selling pens to supplement his income as a Wisconsin telegraphy teacher before deciding to patent his own in 1889.

I wonder if George envisaged the ongoing success of his pen company, which would see it celebrate its 125th birthday in 2016, but he must have soon realised that his products would make him a global supplier.

Early Parker pens to look out for include the Black Giant, launched in 1905, the Duofold, a great seller during the Roaring Twenties, the Parker 51 and 61 (1939 and 1956) and the Parker Vector, which was introduced in 1982.

Yet again in America, Walter Sheaffer of Fort Madison patented a self-filling fountain pen in 1908 before terman in later years was much more affordable - and ison patented a self-filling fountain pen in 1908 before setting up his Kansas City company in 1912 and offering customers a ten dollar pen guaranteed to last

The early Sheaffer pens were made of red or black hard rubber but in 1924 he began using a new ma-terial, Radite, the colours were mar-bled jade green and black and he started to stamp serial numbers on the nibs in 1926.

The Sheaffer brand was bought by Bic in 1996, then by A T Cross Company in 2014, and Sheaffer pens are today still very much luxury items.

In addition to the older pens, vintage Sheaffer collectors will be seeking include the Touchdown, Snorkel, Pen for Men, Targa and School Pen, dating from the 1940s to the 1970s.

Moving closer to home, we have the Onoto Patent Self-filling Pen, introduced in 1905 by British company Thomas de la Rue, printers of stamps and bank notes.

Thomas de la Rue, printers of stamps and bank notes. The Onoto featured a new plunger-filler system and was guaranteed not to leak – it became one of the best selling fountain pens of all and was used by Florence Nightingale and Winston Churchill.

Ever closer was Richard Esterbrook who launched a fountain pen with a nib made of the alloy osmiridium in Birmingham during the early 1930s.

So we have a number of famous pen manufacturer names to look out for, others including Mabie Todd, Conway Stewart and Wahl Eversharp . . . so put those ballpoints away and head off to the saleroom!

John Ridgway is based at Perry and Phillips Auctioneers in Low Town, Bridgnorth. The firm holds valuation days, for sale items only, every Wednes-day from 10am until 4pm at their Mill Street sale-room in Low Town and auctions of antiques and collectables are held on the first Tuesday of each

Fascinating facts about our fabulous fabrics

Cotton growing on a seedhead

FABRIC has been a part of my life for more than 40 years. It is a fascinating subject and I have detailed some of the most interesting facts below:

Silk is produced by the mulberry silkworm, it was first developed in ancient China as early as 3600BC. A silk rope is stronger than a metal wire of the same thickness and it takes more than 25 mulberry trees to produce 3kgs of silk. A silk dress requires 70kgs of mulberry tree leaves!

Cotton is a fibre that grows around the seeds of the cotton plant and is almost pure seeds of the cotton plant and is almost pure seeds of the cotton plant and is almost pure cellulose. It was discovered at least 7000 years ago and its by products are used in many products, including margarine and bank notes, US paper money is 75% cotton. It can absorb 27 times its own weight in water.

Linen is said to be the oldest textile fibre. It is produced from a self-pollinating crop called flax and gets softer the more it is washed. Nettles make softer, finer, silkier and stronger fibre than linen and are regularly used in northern parts of the world. The other 25% of those US bank notes is linen!

Wool has been used for clothing since the stone age. It has UV protection and is naturally non-allergenic, water resistant and fire resistant. The wool from about seven sheep would wrap all the way around the earth.

Bamboo creates a fabric which has natural wicking abilities, pulling moisture away from the skin and reducing odour. It has natural anti-bacterial qualities. It is sustainable, grows quickly and doesn't need pesticides to survive. It is one of the newer fabrics appearing in the high street retailers.

Today we find many more man-made fibres in our clothing due to the reduced cost of production:

Mylon is a plastic launched in the 1930's, believed to have been named due to its discov-ery by two places – New York and London. It was patented on the same day in both cities. Acrylic is a true synthetic fibre produced from a polymer resin extruded and spun. First marketed by DuPont 1941 under the brand name ORLON. Acetate is one of the oldest artificial fibres.

Actate is one of the oldest artificial nores. Although the fibre is mammade, its ingredient is cellulose, obtained from wood pulp, sometimes from cotton.

Rayon is a soft filament also produced from cellulose, it was patented in 1894 under the brand name 'Viscose'. A substitute for natural silk.

the brand name 'Viscose'. A substitute for natural silk.

Microfibre is a mix of polyester and polyamide and was invented 20 years ago in Japan. It is 100 times finer than a human hair, lightweight and super soft.

According to creativity coach Neil Pavitt, author of a new book called Brainhack, you can unlock your brain to think smarter, become more fo-cused, more creative and more innovative.

"Think of people with dyslexia. They might have learning difficulties, but they certainly don't have achieving difficulties. Einstein, Jamie Oliver and Jennifer Aniston were or are dyslexic.

"They have to use more of their visual brain and are good at seeing the bigger picture, while having to adapt to get over their difficulties with language. People with dyslexia are four times more likely than the rest of the novulation to become self-made rest of the population to become self-made millionaires."

He offers the following brainhacks to help our brains work better in everyday situa-

RUBBER DUCKING

Verbalise your problem to a rubber duck instead of a person. Keep the duck on your desk and when you have a problem, explain it to the duck. By stating the problem out loud, your brain mentally organises all the information, simplifies the problem and engages more areas of the brain. Unlike a person, the duck won't interrupt, yawn or say he's too busy to deal with this right now. CAT POWER Studies have found that the most produc-

Studies have found that the most productive people aren't the ones who work the longest, but those who take regular breaks. One study found that the 10 per cent of employees with the highest productivity didn't put in longer hours than anyone else, but took 17-minute breaks for every 52 minutes of work. Don't switch on the news, which can create a negative mindset, but watch something more light-hearted such as a cat video or something funnier, which creates an open, happier mind and thought process. MESS TT UP

MESS IT UP
Research shows that people in a messy environment come up with more creative ideas. "There's an unconscious element that determines that in a messy environment, your mind wanders in different directions and enters more interesting areas."
FORGET FASHION
Waving the seme outfit employe you to Wearing the same outfit enables you to make fewer decisions. "Barack Obama is almost always seen in grey or blue suits. He says: 'I don't want to make decisions about what I'm eating or wearing, because I have too many other decisions to make'. It gives you more brain energy for the rest of the day because your mind becomes more tired with each decision you make.

CHANGE IT UP

The smaller the unit of time a task is expressed in, the closer it seems and so the more likely you are to start working on it. For example, if you have a three-month deadline, express it as 90 days. In one experiment, participants were asked when they would start saving for retirement. Some were told they would retire in 30 years, others that their work life would end in 10,950 days. Results showed that the latter group was likely to start saving four times sooner than the former. an the former.
EMBRACE SARCASM

EMBRACE SARCASM

Sarcasm engages more of the brain - for both the giver and the receiver. Telling someone, "Don't work too hard" when they are clearly resting puts the receiver's brain into abstract thinking mode which increases creativity, according to research.

BE MUSICAL

Take up an instrument, even if you're not musical, because it gives the brain a workout. It engages lots of different parts of the brain and creates new neural pathways. "One test at the University of Florida of 60-85-year-olds who received piano lessons, found that after six months, they had gained bigger memory."

Ideal time to re-kindle connection with nature

THE Easter holidays are upon us and there's no betthe Easter mondays are upon us and there's in better time than spring to engage the kids with gardening projects, or take them to outdoor places which will both inspire and delight them.

It's surely time to redress the balance of children's It's surely time to recress the parameter of children alack of connection with nature.

Some 12 per cent of children in England have not visited a park, forest, garden or any other natural environment for at least 12 months, according to a new Government study.

So, have a look at Easter events with the National Government study.

So, have a look at Easter events with the National Trust (www.nationaltrust.org.uk), whether it's an Easter egg hunt, crafts, cookery or bushcraft skills.

The four RHS gardens (www.nhs.org.uk) will also be holding a range of events, from Lindt Gold Bunny hunts and spring 'I-Spy' - a journey around the garden looking for spring plants, animals and equipment - to themed storytelling and birds of prey displays.

But you can also sort out simple projects in your own garden, says Matthew Appleby, deputy editor at Horticulture Week, author, garden blogger and father-of-two, who is concerned that children are losing touch with nature.

"I see a 'disconnect' between children and nature largely due to the rise of the internet," he says.

"A poll by Persil found that more than half of parents encourage their children to avoid messy activities such as gardening and baking.

courage their children to avoid messy activities such as gardening and baking.

"One in three children say that they did not like getting dirty, their preferred activities being television-watching and playing on video games."

Some companies have made inroads into tempting youngsters into the garden with their child-friendly products.

Compost

Seed Pantry, for instance, has launched a new Children's Me Seeds Starter Kit, containing seeds to grow cress, sunflowers, pumpkins and sweetcorn, as well as all the compost discs, pots and labels you need to get started (£12.50, www.seedpantry.co.uk).

Attractive children's tools and clothing have also made their mark, with companies such as Briers (www.briersltd.co.uk) providing everything children might need for their garden adventures.

There's also plenty of ideas for children's projects in Appleby's latest book, The Children's Garden.

These include:

The all-vou-can eat hanging basket: The beauty

Tumbling tomatoes can cascade down the sides. Hang at children's eye level so they can feed and water.

Plant up an old handbag or high-heeled shoe. Adults need to make a hole in the bottom, add some compost and let the child put in a plant, such as a pelargonium or chilli plant.

Create a miniature garden: These projects take gardening down to children's eye level and make plants seem less intimidating.

Use an old washing-up bowl or clean litter tray with some drainage holes in the base.

Including children's own toys – dolls, dinosaurs or fairies – gives them a sense of ownership.

For a dinosaur garden, use prehistoric-looking plants such as small ferns and moss, plus creeping mint and thyme for the dinosaur models to creep along.

An indoor mini garden follows the same principle. Use cacti and pebbles to create a desert cowboy scene.

If it rains, take growing inside. The old favourite of a cress head grown in an old pair of tights is great, but update it by using popcorn seeds – children prefer popcorn to crees. popcorn to cress.

Place on a pot and water for a quick introduction to the magic of growing your own.

Plants for free. If you're on a budget, cut-off tops of carrots, turnips, parsnips or beetroot will grow again on a saucer of water or in a pot. Or try pineapple tops using the same method, or avocado stones, balanced half over a glass of water.

GOOD ENOUGH TO EAT - Weeds

- Weeds

BEFORE you go throwing those dandelions, nettles and ground elder into the compost bin, think again – because weeds can miraculously be turned into gournet veg.

If you boil nettles, their sting instantly disappears and they can be added to soups and quiches. Cover dandelions with a bucket a couple of weeks before harvesting them for mild-tasting pale leaves that are great in salads, or lightly steam some leaves of ground elder – one of the hardest perennial weeds to eradicate – and serve them with a knob of butter. Other weeds. innaruest perennia weeds to eradicate – and serve them with a knob of butter. Other weeds, in-cluding Shepherd's Purse, has deliciously spicy leaves similar to those of watercress, while pine-apple weed gives a taste of the tropical, which goes well in yoghurt dips or sprinkled on salads.

Layering: a great solution for hard-to-root shrubs

By Hannah Stephenson

THERE are some plants that just don't do very well with traditional propagation from cuttings - rhododendrons, camellias, honey-suckles and daphnes are just a

But many 'problem plants' can be propagated by a method called layering.

Unlike cuttings, which have to survive on their own, simple layering induces roots without actually cutting the shoots off the parent plant.
And because the shoots have a source of

And because the shoots have a source or food and water from the parent plant while they are forming roots, they have a good chance of survival.

Simple layering is best done in spring or autumn, when the plant is actively growing.

Choose a branch that is no more than two choose a branch that is no more than two seasons old, which is at ground level or can be bent to touch the soil.

Dig the ground over where the branch is to connect with the soil, making a small hole where the stem will be positioned, adding a little compost and sharp sand to form a free draining areas to encourage rooting.

ing a little compost and sharp sand to form a free-draining area to encourage rooting. Strip the branch of leaves within 15cm on either side of where the stem is to touch the soil, to concentrate the plant's energies on creating new roots, then cut a slit in the stem and push the damaged stem into the hole, pegging it down with a forked stick or U-shaped piece of wire to hold it down, ensuring the wound is in direct contact with the soil.

Stake

Peg the shoots upright, so they will grow upwards and be easier to lift later on.

If you need to, stake the shoot beyond the rooting stem so that it isn't damaged by wind rock (when roots are loosened because

Cover the stem with more compost and water in to settle the soil.

It's wise to put a large stone over the top, both to hold the layer in place and to conserve moisture.

It may take the layer up to two years to root, but when it does it can be detached other shrubs suitable for layering include magnolia, syringa, forsythia and viburnum. Upright plants whose branches won't easily connect with the soil, such as witch easily connect with the soil, such as witch hazel, acer and jasmine may be more suited to air layering, a technique whereby the compost is taken to the layer rather than the other way round.

Start by making a cut in the stem just below a leaf joint and passing vertically through it up the stem.

Sprinkle hormone rooting powder on the cut, keeping it open with either a matchstick or a small amount of moist sphagnum moss. Wrap more moss around the joint and then wrap the whole thing in clear polythene, tying it top and bottom.

After a while, roots will form and you should see them through the polythene.

Once the shoot has rooted, detach it from

To increase stocks of blackberries and hybrid berries, try tip layering.

In mid-to-late spring, choose a long arching stem that easily reaches ground level.

Bury the tip of the shoot 7.5cm (3in) under the surface of the soil. Peg it down (if necessary) with a loop of thick wire. Water if dry. Roots should develop from the shoot tip by the following autumn or spring.

Serpentine layering is more suitable for climbers such as clematis, jasmine, wisteria and honeysuckle. It involves looping the stems of climbers in and out of the soil - so that you end up with a sort of Loch Ness monster effect – to encourage roots to de-velop at several points along the stem. The technique is similar to simple layering, although thin-stemmed climbers don't have to be wounded

TIPS OF THE WEEK

Why do I need to have my Chimney swept?

To protect your health, from breathing in carbon monoxide which can happen from blocked or partly blocked flue

Regular cleaning will remove soot and creosote which will drastically reduce the chances of having a chimney fire resulting in £1000's worth of damage to your property.

How often does my chimney need sweeping?

This depends on a number of factors such as coal wood gas or oil, the type of appliance such as stove, open fire, gas fire, oil boiler/cooker, the duration of use, the moisture content of the wood you are burning, the type of chimney i.e. lined, unlined, tall or short flue.

Does it make a mess?

I very rarely make a mess, I always take my time to keep the mess to a minimum. There is little or no dust if your chimney is swept on a regular basis.

The cost will depend on the type of appliance, the chimney height and size and when you last had it swept. The average cost is just £40. If you are comparing my price with other chimney sweeps, make sure you are comparing like

With 20 Years Experience I will also supply expert advice on fuels and how to get the best out of your stove or fire. The advice alone could save you more than the cost of a sweep!

Arthurs agree that the new Vauxhall is Astra-nomical!

tic, so says news coverage of the new Astra which has been robustly confirmed by Matt Hine, sales manager at award-winning Vauxhall dealer Arthurs of Oswestry.

"George Fowler in the Daily Star says the Astra is now a blindingly brilliant car and although it may look much the same as the car it replaces in every other respect it's changed dramatically for the better," said Matt.
"This is the feedback that the Arthurs dealership is receiving more and more from customers as sales go leaping forward. Customers confirm the press reports that the new Astra is quieter, roomier, better equipped and with a more upmarket interior gives a proper swish, smooth and premium big car feel on the road."

Matt, who was appointed Arthurs of Oswestry's sales manager more than a year ago, went on to say that news coverage about the Astra was very much how the dealership viewed the changes.

"It is also in line with customer comments which we receive every day," said Matt.

"Press and customers like the fact that the new Astra is two inches shorter which makes a refreshing change in a time when cars seem to get bigger with every new model.

"As George Fowler says, width is up slightly, but still less than an inch, and that coupled to wheels planted right into the corners, gives it more room inside, even though it sits half an inch

"But, and wait for this, the new Astra is a colossal 200kg lighter which has made a massive change to its handling and speed.
"I couldn't agree more that it gives the Astra a refreshing feel that makes it a genuine delight to drive." And says the report: "The lightness doesn't transmit itself simply through speed

"You immediately notice its crisp steering which gives it a far more planted feel, especially on twisty country roads where the Astra's fine handling gives it a whole new sense of being in an upmarket, well built, desirable mo

In further news coverage, Auto Express reader John Walsh writes into the magazine to say 'congratulations to the designers behind the new Vauxhall Astra on making it smaller on the outside and bigger on the inside. "This is in contrast to other manufacturers' designers who somehow keep managing to make exteriors bigger and the interiors smaller.

Matt added: "The best accolade the media could give the new Astra is that the car is an absolute joy to drive."

Jaguar XE builds on MKII's heritage

special about driving a Jaguar despite the array of competitors fighting for a slice of the brand's market, writes Graham Breeze.

As the competition grows, develops and improves Jaguar designers could easily have sat back, enjoying the luxury of a protected comfort zone. But instead they produced an XE R-Sport saloon which is a sheer joy to drive.

The rear wheel drive XE is the only vehicle in its class to use a light aluminium skin, which when paired with double wishbone front suspension and an integral link rear axle, is fundamental to the dynamics.

Jaguar's expertise in aluminium structure engineering means exceptional fuel consumption and emissions

In fact the 2 0i4 163PS diesel on test returned figures of 68.9mpg on the combined cycle, CO2 emission figures of only 106 g/km and was still capable of a top speed of 132mph and 0-60mph in under eight seconds.

There's a long 2,835mm wheelbase

There's still something very and low seating position meaning a streamlined profile, while you will not be disappointed inside the cabin which offers the expected outstanding levels of comfort

It's quite simply a class beating interior that tells you all you need to know about Jaguar

Jaguar's new InControl infotainment system takes centre stage with an in-novative 8" touchscreen bringing fast access to all features and functions along with iOS and Android smartphone apps

The R-Sport trim benefits from a suite of design changes to go with the image including a dedicated body kit and the model on test came with a brilliant list of standard items.

There's torque vectoring through braking, drive control, sports suspension, power steering, cruise control, hill start assist, brake pad wear indicators, electric parking brake, stop/start facility and speed proportional steering.

There's rain sensing automatic wipers, all-round electric windows, an emergency brake system, stability control, traction control, rear parking assist, tyre pressure monitoring and an impressive SatNav system.

Back seat passengers get armrests but the leg room of a third passenger is badly inhibited by the transmission tunnel

Base price is £34,075 but the test car would have set you back £44,341 thanks to lightweight 17" alloys, heated and cooled seats, a power conveni-ence pack, an electric tow bar, Meridian sound system, 40-20-40 split and fold rear seats, heated steering wheel, parking assist, interior mood lighting, a heads-up display for the driver and a full sliding panoramic roof. £44,341 may sound a lot but it's a competitive label in this sector and the model is an absolute joy to drive on both country roads and motorways thanks to being the stiffest and most aerodynamic Jaguar saloon car ever

Jaguar created the blueprint for the first ever sports saloon with the iconic Mk II, a car which distilled sports car performance and dynamics into a stylish four-door body. The new XE builds on this unique heritage.

The leek, low, coupé-like exterior proportions combine with an efficient package – instantly recognisable as a Jaguar.

Infiniti Q3 a modern sculpture

By Ian Donaldson

HOW many people buy a car they think is ugly? Don't fret about the answer - it's close to a nice round zero.

We like to drive cars we like the look of, sometimes - especially - if other drivers think we've bought something hit with an ugly stick (I'm looking at you, Nissan Juke).

Now imagine if it was noticed not for its oddity but for a delicious mix of swoops and swerves that lend an air of modern sculpture in motion.

That would please the owner and in the case of the car you see here make the manufacturer very happy indeed.

For Infiniti is on a mission. Not to go into brochure detail of the models it sells but simply to force themselves on to the radar of anyone looking to buy a new car.

Even with a £250 million investment in the plant to make the new Q30 (in Sunderland, alongside Nissans from the parent company) the Infiniti brand's sales in the UK remain anishingly small.

For the moment, at any rate. The Q30 is the first of an upcoming range designed to take on the premium opposition, with names like Audi and BMW bandied about. Get it right and the sales will follow.

To say it looks the business is, to these eyes, a large understatement. I think it looks terrific, and stand-out smart in the optional (£670) liquid copper paint you see here.

More important, the navigator-in-chief, who knows nothing about Infiniti, thought so

The good news continues inside, where a tempting mix of soft leather, alloy look high-lights and tasteful splashes of wood make is a stylish place to spend an hour or two.

Time during which, if you're a fully paid up petrol head, to spot that some bits (switches dash display) look as though they've come from a Mercedes-Benz.

Which they have; Nissan (so Infiniti too) has a deal with the German giant, which takes smaller diesel engines in return for... bigger ones and some other parts. Even the platform the Q30 is built on was donated rom the Mercedes A-Class, which you may feel is no bad thing. It must help keep costs down, which on the Q30 start at £20,550 for a car with a 1.6 litre petrol engine and top out at £31,930 for a 2.0 litre petrol auto with all-wheel drive. It puts the car firmly into Audi A4 and BMW 3

Series territory.

The £31,180 test car, only one notch from

To say it looks the business is, to these eyes, a large understatement. I think it looks terrific the top, costs £33,900 with the addition of some extras - notably £1,400 for a mildly old fashioned looking satellite navigation system, a £650 Bose sound system (superb) and the already mentioned look-atme paint job.

Also slightly old fashioned is the 2.2 li-tre diesel engine donated by Mercedes. It was always a grumbly old thing and only sinks into the background here when nice ly warmed through.

Still, on smooth roads and at a steady pace the Q30 is superbly refined. It is also a fine crusher of Britain's worst road bumps, making for an engaging car when there are passengers to move about.

Not quite so much fun at the wheel although a smooth approach brings benefits in ways other than fellow occupants remarking on the comfortable way they've just covered 100 miles.

A dash readout of 49mpg isn't too shabby for a car that needs make no excuses when parked next to an Audi, BMW, Mercedes or Jaguar. None of which looks so smart either

Win boosts United in their quest for survival

LLANFAIR UNITED ended

LLANFAIR UNITED ended a four-match losing streak by clinching an important 2-1 home win over Prestatyn to revive their Cymru Alliance survival hopes. Victory, which completed the double over the Seasiders, kept Llanfair fourth from bottom, above Powys rivals Caersws, who suffered a 2-1 loss at Denbigh Town.

Iain Edmunds gave United a 35th-minute lead and, despite Mike Parker equalising on the hour from the penalty spot, the hosts were not to be denied as Jamie Davies pounced for the winner four minutes later.

After a few disappointing but close results in recent weeks, Llanfair delivered the goods in tough, rain-drenched conditions at the Mount Field as they more than matched their visitors throughout the 90 minutes.

Although goalkeeper Mark Richards was forced into a couple of decent early saves Edmunds, Paul Griffiths and Davies all went close for Llanfair as they consitently kept catching Prestatyn on the counter-attack.

In the second half, Prestatyn were awarded a penalty on the hour after Vaughan was ruled to have fouled in the box, with Parker scoring from the spot to level the score.

Undaunted, Llanfair reacted well and four minutes later a Paul Griffiths strike was spilled by the keeper and Davies slid in to score.

Llanfair had further opportunities on the break, while some scrambled defence denied Prestatyn at the other end as the hosts held on for a crucial win.

TWO terrific strikes from Matty Owen sentenced The New Saints to their first Welsh Premier League defeat at Park Hall in more than three years.

Despite the setback, the defending cham-pions are still well placed to lift the crown for a fifth successive season as they hold a five-point lead with just three games left.

Eagles look to remain in the title race

OSWESTRY bid to keep alive their challenge in rugby's Cheshire South when they return to action at home to Isle of Man side Ramsey on Saturday (3pm).

Lying second, the Eagles were dealt a blow after a late penalty sentenced them to a hard-fought 23-22 loss at Moore in their last action two weeks ago.

That left them seven points adrift of leaders Manchester Medics who moved closer to the league title courtesy of a 33-5 victory away to Vagabonds. With just four games remaining, the Medics are firm favourites, but the Os men will be out to keep up the pressure

Despite the defeat, the Eagles stand on the brink of promotion to the South Lancs and Cheshire One.

Across the border, COBRA will be checking on injuries as they bid to edge towards safety in the Swalec Welsh League division one (north) in Saturday's home meeting with in-form Bala (2.30pm).

The Meifod side lie just above the two relegation places, 10 points clear of Dolgellau, who have three games in hand, after their 24-18 defeat at rainswept Ruthin.

Weaver competed in a further three events over the weekend and just missed out on a bronze medal, coming fourth in the 50m backstroke in a personal best time of 32.40sec. Sharks head coach Peter Swanton said: "It's really tough competing at this level. All three coped brilliantly.

"They all swam to their full potential achieving some big personal best times in all the events entered, which is all you can ask. They can all be proud."

Stephens stays cautious in survival fight

BOSS Rhys Stephens hailed Llanfair United's re-BOSS Rhys Stephens halled Llantair United's re-solve as his side prepare for another crunch home clash on Saturday against Conwy United in their Cymru Alliance survival battle. After four defeats on the bounce, Llanfair stopped the rot with a much-needed 2-1 home win

Prestatyn Town at a rain-drenched Mount

Field.
That result kept them two points clear of the bottom three but, with eight games remaining, there is still plenty of work to be done as the relegation dogfight hots up.
"We needed that, it gives us that bit of breathing space. But there is still a long way to go," said Stephens.

"We have been playing well without picking up results, and we deserved the win on Saturday for our effort and work rate. "Although Prestatyn are on a bit of a bad run themselves, they are still a decent side. The con-

Mour Alex, however, won 1-0 at basement fivals Caersws on Easter Monday to move to within two points of Llanfair. It proved a fantastic weekend for the club with the reserves lifting the Emrys Morgan Cup for a fifth time in their history with a 2-0 victory over Llandysul in the final at Penrhyncoch.

GUILSFIELD boss Dan Barton admitted his side failed to deliver in their disappointing 2-1 reverse at lowly Conwy Borough as hopes of a high finish in the Cymru Alliance suffered a setback.

"We were awful," admitted Barton, whose side look for improvements at home to Flint Town United on Saturday.

"It was a poor team performance. Eight or nine players did not perform and we have to do better than that."

HARRISON: N D TO PAN

FOOTBALL by John Bridgwater

New Saints manager Craig Harrison insists there's no cause for panic despite seeing his side's Welsh Premier League title bid put on hold with back-to-back defeats.

After going down 2-1 at gap Connah's Quay, the defending champions slipped to a 2-1 loss to Newtown last Saturday – their first league re-verse at Park Hall since November 24, 2012.

Although they remain five points ahead with three games left, Harrison has been frustrated at being unable to wrap up a fifth title in succession.

And he expects his players to bounce back as they prepare for Saturday's televised Welsh Cup semi-final with gap Connah's Quay at Newtown (5.15pm) as they look to stay on course for back-to-back trebles. to-back trebles.
"We know last week's performance was not to-back trebles.

"We know last week's performance was not good enough in any shape or form, the lads are honest enough to accept that and will be looking to right a few wrongs," he said.

"It will be another tough game on Saturday against gap Connah's Quay, but I'm expecting a big reaction from us.

"We have won the cup for the last two seasons and it is a trophy we are desperate to win again. Everyone's still hungry for success.

"The last few games have been disappointing, but it's important we keep clear heads and look at the bigger picture.

"We are still five points clear at the top with three games to go and, if we beat Bala in our next league game, then we have won the league.

"We have also won the league cup and are in the semi-final of the Welsh Cup. If someone had offered us that at this stage of the season, we would have bitten their hands off."

The Saints' semi-final with Connah's Quay kicks off at 5.15pm and will follow the other semi-final between Airbus UK and Port Talbot, which is also being staged at Newtown, with a 1pm kick off.

Howzat! Success for schools

Moreton Hall powered their way to the under-15 Lady Taverners title

PACKWOOD HAUGH & Moreton Hall schools have been crowned under-13 and under-15 Shropshire Lady Taverners Indoor Cricket champions for 2016. Both sides made their way through their respective district qualifying rounds to then maintain a 100 per cent record in the strongly contested county finals at Telford College of Arts & Technology's Sports Dome. This year's competition boasted a record 18 schools (20 teams) at under-13s and 17 schools (18 teams) at under-15s, with secondary schools across the length and breadth of Shropshire taking part. Both will now go on to represent Shropshire in the Midlands regional finals, which take place at Fenton Manor, Stoke-on-Trent, on April 18 and 21 respectively.
